Foremost Horticulturist

Another old and respected Western Australian has passed away in the person of Mr. George Hayman, whose death occurred at his Mt. Lawley residence yesterday.

Born in Perth 67 years ago, he could fairly claim to have seen this city grow from insignificance to the rapidly progressing capital it is today. The greater part of Mr. Hayman's life was spent in two positions, firstly with J. M. Ferguson and Co., timber merchants at Fremantle, where he was for 15 years, and subsequently as accountant to Bowra and O'Dea, with whom he had been during the past 20 years.

Mr. Hayman, outside his inner circle of friends and business associations, was known to many other people on account of his great love of flowers, and the very high standard he achieved as an horticulturist. Whilst a cultivator of many plants and beautiful blooms, his chief success was with chrysanthemums. His knowledge of the garden was wide and varied, and on numerous occasions he lectured to various societies on floriculture.

The late Mr. Hayman was a Past Worthy Patriarch of the Grand Division of the W.A. Sons of Temperance, financial secretary of the Good Samaritan Division. Sons of Temperance: a member of the Jubilee Division and the Perseverance Division of the same order. As his lodge associations indicate, he was a prominent supporter of temperance, and was an ex-president of the West Australian Alliance. He leaves a wife, four daughters and two sons to mourn their loss, and the funeral takes place at Karrakatta tomorrow.

Government motor cars which had got into the hands of private individuals are being collected by the King Dictator of Jugo Slavia.
